2011: 6-4

MIFFLINTOWN — If you ask Gary Klingensmith “Where’s the beef?,” his answer may be, “It graduated.” Klingensmith — the senior statesman of coaching in his 44th year on the sideline — begins his first year as a Hall of Fame member with only one returning player from his front five on offense: 6-2, 315 pound tackle Chase Bowsman.

“We lost a lot of physical talent there — those are big boys,” Klingensmith said. “You’re talking about maybe six, seven boys who weighed well over 200 pounds and could run. We lost the physical aspect of our team there.

hard time replacing the front line, the offensive line especially.”

A number of them were two-way players, including Dustin Burd, a three-year defensive starter who will play for Stevens Tech this fall, and Cody Saner, who is at Lock Haven.

On the credit side of the ledger, the Indians see 10 letter winners back on the field this fall, seven of whom were starters a year ago, including a trio of 48-minute players.

Klingensmith believes his team has the offensive tools to get the job done, starting on the opposite side of the line from Bowsman, where Patrick Fitzgerald will be called on to shore up the middle.

“(He) has nice size, he’s a brute of a boy. He’s making great strides over last year,” the coach said. “But there in the middle, we have a new group of boys. We feel we have six boys to man five positions down there. Hopefully we can avoid the injury bug.”

In fact, the one place the team is small is on the roster count — only 35 this year, within the average range in Klingensmith’s long tenure, but not a number to be too comfortable with.

“We can be very, very competitive if we don’t have a lot of injuries,” he said. “We don’t have a lot of quality depth.”

So it will be the starters who will have to be the finishers. None will be under more pressure — hopefully only figuratively — than Neil Bodley, who was tabbed to replace Colton Shertzer at quarterback.

“We had plans on probably using the wildcat offense along with our regular offense,” Klingensmith said. “Bodley is a superior athlete, potentially one of the better athletes I’ve had
